The Battle Isn't Only on the Field

Those who last in senior softball must continually reinvent themselves. If you don't, you'll simply quit one day and instead of heading to first base, you'll begin your trek to the grave — and it's probably not as far away as you imagine.

I've been in this senior game 16 years. At 55, I was a stud with 18-inch arms that could muscle a bad pitch over the fence against the wind.

At 58, I pulled a groin tendon that had me limping for a year.

My 60th birthday present was a hernia that handicapped my game for another year before I had it operated on and went through recovery.

Then my right eye went bad and I couldn't see the ball correctly and learned to use my left eye only, until I had another operation and fixed the right eye.

At 63, I had a heart attack that completely changed my vitality to this day, and affected me psychologically even worse. I had to lose a lot of weight-lifting muscle to keep my weight down and no longer could bicep the ball over the fence.

At 64, I got plantar fasciitis and it crippled my stride for two whole years.

At 66, I had a pacemaker Continued on Page 8

Player Suspended at 40s Spring Worlds; Team Placed on Notice

A 40s Masters player was suspended indefinitely and a teammate and the team were placed on notice after an incident in which an umpire was threatened and physically pushed at the 40's Spring World Championships in Cathedral City in March.

The incident occurred on Saturday, March 18 at BLD in the 6:30 p.m. game between Team Amaya and SOFA Kings.

After a safe call at third base, Team Amaya's third baseman, Robert Muro, advanced toward the umpire yelling and swearing, according to two independent reports, plus a report from the umpire and director.

Muro was ejected and the pitcher, Brett Thomas, walked off the mound, pulled bats from the fence and threw them out of play, then walked toward the umpire, slammed his mask on the ground, hurled "F" bombs at the umpire and was ejected, according to the reports.

At that time, according to reports, Team Amaya surrounded the umpire and the umpire forfeited the game.

After the game, Muro reportedly physically pushed the umpire near the dugout.

Because the umpire was too upset to adequately apprise the director of all the facts, the director continued the game and ejected Brett Thomas for inappropriate Covering the Bases behavior.

Senior Softball USA does not tolerate unsportsmanlike conduct and tactics of intimidation.

As a result of this incident, Muro was suspended indefinitely, and may face assault charges by the umpire.

Thomas and the Team Amaya were warned that any further instance will result in an automatic two-year suspension for the manager and all players on the team.

It should be noted that this was an isolated incident and does not reflect the behavior of other Masters or Senior teams. We strive to provide an atmosphere of fun, camaraderie and fair play in which players and their families can enjoy the sport without fear of being subjected to profanity, intimidation or violence.

Chronic Umpire Shortage

Throughout softball – and other sports – we have had increasingly difficult time attracting new umpires and enough umpires to staff two umpires for each bracket game.

Therefore, beginning this year, we have increased the umpire pay for single games and will only have doubles on Championship day: the last day of each session.

We are striving to attract the best umpires possible through this increase in pay and believe that it is better to have good quality single umpires than having two marginal umpires. This also allows us to have two top umpires on the last day because we need fewer umpires on the last day because of the shorter schedules.

This is NOT to save money. Our budget for umpires will be the same as the old system – the difference will be umpires receive more pay for single games.

We hope that this system will help ensure we have the best umpires available in the sport for SSUSA events.

Bat Controversy

A bat was questioned by an umpire during the Southwest Championships and the issue has developed into a controversy among some women's teams during both that tournament and the Rock 'n' Reno Challenge Cup.

The incident began during the 40 Women's Major division game between Old School and Smack That at Lorenzi Park during the Southwest Championships in April.

The umpire noticed an old bat that appeared to have grooves and was worn when a Smack That player came to bat. The umpire examined the

Warren Buffet: Icon of Stock Market

By Jack Sirard

Like a lot of investors, I've always been intrigued by legendary investor Warren Buffett and as a result, his highly successful investment company, Berkshire Hathaway Inc.

The company's long-term performance on Wall Street has been nothing short of miraculous, racking up amazing gains as its wide range of businesses showed nothing but rising revenues and profits year after year.

Over the years, I loved to follow the stock but it was always way too expensive and didn't pay a cash dividend, something that's important for a lot of retired investors. Instead of dividends, Buffett and his team have historically chosen to reinvest its profits in their businesses or to look for new ones to buy.

Berkshire Hathaway's A listed shares trade on the New York Stock Exchange for roughly $250,000 each, making it the most expensive shares on the Big Board. So unless you're a financial institution such as a pension fund, you're not going to be snapping up many of these shares.

However, several years back, Buffett created a second class of stock commonly called Berkshire B shares and they sell at a huge discount to the A shares. The most recently traded for about $170 a share.

These were the shares that interested me. They're certainly not cheap, but after years of watching the company's performance, I recently decided to add some to my portfolio.

Buffett essentially uses Berkshire as an investment

holding company, buying both significant shares of publicly traded companies as well as entire businesses themselves.

He and his No. 1 investment partner Charlie Munger garner most of their attention by their Wall Street investments. And why not? Their investment portfolio reads like a who's who of the Blue Chip crowd.

Included in Berkshire's portfolio are the likes of Coca-Cola, Wells Fargo, Kraft Heinz Company, American Express, Apple and IBM, where he has reduced his holdings of late. And in the last year or so, Berkshire has taken a shine to the airline industry and has added large blocks of United Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Southwest Airlines and American Airlines.

Over the years that Buffett has run Berkshire, he also has taken full control of companies like See's Candies, GEICO and Dairy Queen. In addition, the company wholly owns BNSF Railway, Lubrizol, Fruit of the Loom, Helzberg Diamonds, FlightSafety International, Pampered Chef and NetJets. His holdings also include a diverse range of businesses including retail, home furnishings, encyclopedia, jewelry sales, newspaper publishing and a handful of regional electric and gas utilities.

The company is headquartered in Buffett's hometown of Omaha, Neb., and that suits him just fine. He's lived in the same house for years and his favorite food seems to be what's on the menu at Dairy Oueen.

He's a strong believer in corporate transparency and has published an "owner's manual" for those owning Berkshire stock. It's readily available on his company's web site, but here's a particular part that I find interesting as a shareholder:

"In line with Berkshire's owner-orientation, most of our directors have a major portion of their net worth invested in the company," Buffett writes. "We eat our own cooking. Charlie's (Munger) family has the majority of its net worth in Berkshire shares; I have more than 98 percent.

"In addition, many of my relatives - my sisters and cousins, for example – keep a huge portion of their net worth in Berkshire stock. Charlie and I feel totally comfortable with this eggs-inone-basket situation because Berkshire itself owns a wide variety of truly extraordinary businesses. Indeed, we believe that Berkshire is close to being unique in the quality and diversity of the businesses in which it owns either a controlling interest or a minority interest of significance.

"Charlie and I cannot promise you results. But we can guarantee that your financial fortunes will move in lockstep with ours for whatever period of time you elect to be our partner. We have no interest in large salaries or options or other means of gaining an "edge" over you. We want to make money only when our partners do and in exactly the same proportion. Moreover, when I do something dumb, I want you to be able to derive some solace from the fact that my financial suffering is proportional to yours."

Not only are Buffett's annual letters widely read, but Berkshire's annual meetings regularly draw more than 20,000 investors to Omaha and have been named Woodstock for Capitalists. The meetings go on throughout the weekend where investors line up to question the top brass and to buy a wide array of products from their company.

Buffett is only paid $100,000 a year with no stock options, making him one of the lowest paid top execs on Wall Street.

The question many investors have is how much longer the Buffett-Munger duo will run the company and who will take over when they do ultimately retire. Admittedly the stock could take a short-term hit when that day comes, but Buffett has repeatedly assured investors that he's groomed a successor and that he believes that the company's future is solid.

That's good enough for me.

Assessing Your Muscular Fitness

By Stan Reents, Senior Softball News Contributor

One of the keys to being successful in playing softball, or any sport for that matter, is muscular fitness.

Muscular fitness can be assessed in three ways:

- Muscular strength
- Muscular power
- Muscular endurance

Exercise scientists consider flexibility another aspect of muscular fitness. I'll cover that in a subsequent article.

Muscular strength is simply how much weight a particular muscle group can lift...one time. The easiest example to illustrate this is grabbing a dumbbell and doing a biceps curl. Most men can curl a 30-pound dumbbell. James Retarides holds the record, lifting 134 pounds with a one-arm curl but some seniors may struggle to curl as little as 15 to 20 pounds.

Muscular strength is important for offensive linemen in football and for wrestlers. But it's also important when you have to twist the lug nuts off the wheel of your car, or if you ever have to carry an unconscious person out of a burning house.

The most weight you can lift one time is called your one repetition max, abbreviated 1-RM. Note that the 1-RM differs for each muscle group. Knowing your 1-RM for various muscle groups allows you to design a weight-training program in a scientific way.

The bench press is used to assess both muscular strength and muscular endurance. This involves more muscle groups than a biceps curl. When it comes to a single rep, Gene Rychlak Jr. bench pressed 1,010 pounds. Several years later, Ryan Kennelly pressed 1,075 pounds. Yes, really!

However, it can be dangerous to load up a barbell with a huge amount of weight just to see if you can lift it once.

The preferred strategy for measuring 1-RM is to pick a weight that you can lift several times. So, for example, let's say you think you can bench press 200 pounds once. You would use 160 to 180 pounds and count how many times you can press that weight. Then, you calculate your 1-RM using the Brzycki equation.

Muscular power considers how fast you can lift a specific weight. If your buddy can bench press 150 pounds, but it takes him five seconds to complete the lift, and you can lift the same amount of weight in 1 second, you have more muscular power.

Muscular power is important in sports like basketball and volleyball. It's also important in high jump, long jump, triple jump and throwing events like the shot put and javelin. In softball and baseball, swinging a bat, throwing and sprinting all require muscular power. In all of these examples, muscles have to contract fast.

Muscular endurance is how many times in a row a muscle can contract. Running a marathon requires over 40,000 steps. That means each calf muscle is contracting over 20,000 times. Now think about ultra-endurance athletes like Dean Karnazes and Pam Reed who have both run more than 300 miles nonstop.

Other athletes have also demonstrated amazing muscular endurance: David Goggins completed 4,030 pull-ups over a span of 17 hours. Diana Nyad swam from Cuba to Key West, Fla., non-stop. That's 103 miles and it took her 53 hours. Cross-Fit competitions are a severe test of muscle endurance.

The NFL uses a 225-pound bench press test. In 1999, Justin Ernest did 51 reps. For healthy adults, the YMCA bench press test uses an 80-pound barbell for men and a 35-pound barbell for women.

For seniors, arm curls are used to assess muscular fitness in the upper body. In this test, subjects perform as many curls as they can in 30 seconds. An eight-pound dumbbell is used to test men and women use a five-pound dumbbell. A stand-up test is used to assess the lower body. Here, subjects stand up from a chair as many times as they can in 30 seconds.

After you have measured your muscular strength and muscular endurance, you can compare how you rank against your age group. A good reference for these tables is the ACSM book "Complete Guide to Fitness & Health."

Opinions & Letters

Maintaining Fair Play

The guiding principle of Senior Softball USA is to maintain fair play for all competitors.

We believe – strongly – that the success of any sports organization in the long run is determined by its ability to maintain fairness for players and teams.

In our effort to maintain fairness, we strive to apply principles for rating teams and players as evenly as possible. We have led the way in establishing not only five-year age groupings, but also the skill level classifications within each age group.

We emphasize to both directors and umpires the necessity to apply rules evenly and they are recused from any decision-making when they are playing to avoid a conflict of interest.

In addition, we believe that all men and women 40 and over should be welcome to play our sport. We endorse no political party, and make no distinctions concerning race, religion, or lifestyle choice.

We do demand sportsmanship be practiced and abhor tactics of intimidation on the field.

In short, Senior Softball USA is dedicated to providing ALL Masters and Seniors with the opportunity to play the game we love in an atmosphere of comradery and sportsmanship.

And we deeply appreciate working with players and teams to make these goals a reality on the field.

Possible Body Signals of Cancer

By Pete Davignon

There are many ways your body can signal you that a cancer may be present.

Men have urinary issues as we get older. More frequent urination, leaks or even a weak stream normally are signs of enlarged prostate, but it also could mean cancer.

You have small, beanshaped glands in your neck, armpits, and other places in your body. When they're swollen, it means you could have an infection, a cold, or strep throat. Cancers like lymphoma and leukemia also can cause this kind of swelling.

If you see blood in the toilet after you go, talk to your doctor. A bloody stool is likely to come from swollen, inflamed veins called hemorrhoids, but it could be colon cancer. Blood in your urine could be a problem like a urinary tract infection, but it also may signal kidney or bladder cancer.

Find a lump or swelling in your testicles, you need to see your doctor right away. A painless lump is the most common sign of testicular cancer. You may just have a heavy feeling in your lower

California:

Weather, Access Keys to Softball Popularity

California has more than twice the senior softball players as the next state on the list. That state is Florida, which is the top-rated state to retire in Wallethub's report. California's overall ranking by Wallethub.com was brought down largely because of affordability.

In a recent breakdown of SSUSA's player density by state that was done in late 2016, of the 39,264 players in the database, 7,786 were from California.

The popularity of senior softball in the Golden State, specifically in Northern California, may be attributed to the creation and growth of the Northern California Senior Softball Association (NCSSA).

NCSSA runs tournaments every weekend in multiple regions from February through November, allowing teams in the area ample opportunities to play. The organization also creates rules for rosters and playing.

"I got involved in NCSSA in 1994," said Gary Tryhorn, 72, of Walnut Creek in the San Francisco Bay area.

Tryhorn, a SSUSA player, also is the primary contact for NCSSA's Region IV (Alameda, Contra Costa, Del Norte, Humboldt, Lake, Marin, Mendocino, Napa, Solano, Sonoma and Trinity counties).

"It can't be done anywhere else in the country," continued Tryhorn, on the frequent number of tournaments run by NCSSA."I used to play on a Florida team and Florida Half Century runs one tournament a month." Similarly, the Southern California Senior Softball Association also runs one tournament a month.

Freddie Miller, 77, from West Sacramento, whose SSUSA career also dates to the late 1990's agrees on the popularity of the sport in Northern California, calling Sacramento the hub for senior softball.

"I play four days a week, plus tournament ball," said Miller, who plays league with Golden Seniors Softball Club of Sacramento. His tournament team, California Oaks, has been together for decades, starting as a 60's team and graduating along to 65's, 70's and currently 75.

Although California ranked 32nd overall in the study, the state did rank in the top-10 in quality of life (8th), one of the dimensions used in the study. It ranked 20th in health care, another dimension, and tied for third (with Connecticut) in life expectancy, one of the metrics used to calculate health care.

"Playing senior softball helps us stay fit," stated Miller. "We'd be long gone without it."

Affordability was the one dimension that hurt California's overall ranking, as the state came in at No. 42.

"Taxes and cost of living are really high," said Jerry Smith, 65 from Moreno Valley in Southern California, manager of Over the Edge (65 Major). "I wish it was more feasible to stay. We've lost a lot of players moving to Nevada, Arizona, Florida and Colorado."

Despite the state's lack of affordability, Smith says "California is a great place to live."

Like the Northern part of the state, league play is also a catalyst for maintaining a good quality of life for players in Southern California.

"We've got three leagues down here (Menifee, Anaheim, Rancho Cucamonga), and another one farther south in Fallbrook (San Diego)," said Smith. "Leagues are five days a week and it keeps us going. Helps us feel young again. We also get 20-30 guys out for hitting practice.

"Senior softball keeps getting bigger and bigger," continued Smith. "We've got good ballplayers down here that aren't playing yet."

The proof of the growth in the sport can be seen this season, with the Winter World Championships in Phoenix in November (209 teams), the LVSSA/SSUSA Southwest Championships in Las Vegas in April (214 teams) and the Rock 'N Reno Challenge Cup in May/June (196 teams).

Driving the numbers in those tournaments are the large number of players and teams in California.

A major factor that draws people to Southern California is the ideal temperature yearround.

"San Diego has the best weather," said Dan Haveron, 75 from Fallbrook, a longtime member of SSUSA, who currently serves as manager of Top Gun 75 Classics, as well as a regional director for SSUSA in Southern California.

"I'd say 95% of the popularity of senior softball in San Diego is due to the ideal weather. You don't freeze in the winter and don't burn in the summer."

Along with the vast access to leagues and tournament play in California, one driving force keeping senior softball players stay in-state is the fear of change.

"As we get older, it becomes more difficult to make a change," continued Haveron. "At 75, most guys don't want to consider moving."

The third part of The Best States to Retire series will continue in the next edition of Senior Softball News, as we round out the remaining top five SSUSA states.

Take It Easy or Keep Swinging

implanted and had to start being very careful not to get hit in the chest by line drives.

My last year in the 60s took away the remaining cartilage in my right shoulder and I could no longer throw the ball or push through the swing with my right arm. So, at 70 I finally learned how to use my hips to rotate hard and pull the bat with my left arm in a whip action through the ball.

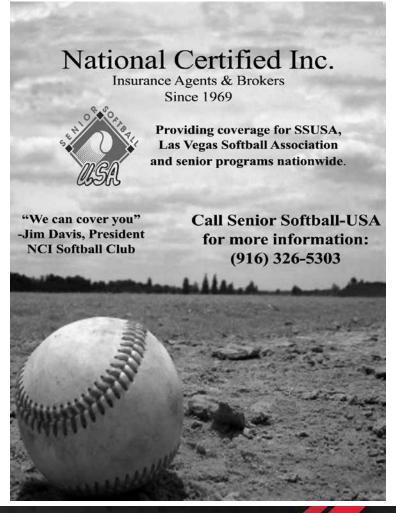

Now I'm almost 71 and debating whether or not to have my shoulder replaced so I can throw the ball again and go back to the outfield. But doc says once replaced it will last maybe six or seven years if I use it hard and up to 10 to 12 if I take it easy. So, I'm gauging how long I have yet to live and deciding whether or not to go down swinging.

Here's what I learned from all of this. I'm no different from the rest of you aging guys with your aches, pains, and operations, but those of us who find ways to compensate and keep going in our beloved sport, keep our zest and exhilaration of living.

Those who get discouraged and quit, almost immediately start to get brittle and lose brightness, and disappear into existence.

There's a huge difference between living and existing.

belly or scrotum or your testicles feel larger.

Trouble swallowing can be a sign of cancer in your throat or the pipe between your mouth and stomach, called the esophagus. Tests like a barium X-ray, will show your throat on the image.

From bad breath to canker sores, most changes in your mouth aren't serious. But if you have white or red patches or sores in your mouth that don't heal after a couple of weeks, especially if you smoke, it may be a sign of oral cancer. Look for a lump in your cheek, trouble moving your jaw, or mouth pain.

It's not normal to lose 10 pounds or more without trying. There's a chance it could be a first sign of cancer of the pancreas, stomach, esophagus, or lung. You can slim down when you change the way you eat or exercise. It can also happen if you have stress or a thyroid problem. If your indigestion doesn't stop, it could be a sign of stomach cancer.

Fatigue is one early sign of some cancers, like leukemia. Some colon and stomach cancers can cause blood loss that you can't see, which can make you feel very tired. If you're wiped out all the time and rest doesn't help, talk to your doctor.

A new spot on your skin or one that changes size, shape, or color could be a sign of skin cancer. Another is a spot that doesn't look the same as all the others on your body.

If you have a nagging cough that doesn't go away or you cough up blood, especially if you are a smoker, see your doctor to check for lung cancer.

Cancer prevention has meant reducing risks through lifestyle choices. Researchers are working to find a medical solution to cancer prevention. There are more than 33 types of cancer and they do not all respond to the same treatment. You can take a pill to lessen the risk of heart disease and stroke, but science has not yet progressed as far, but they are getting closer.

It is estimated that 30 to 50 percent of cancers could be prevented or delayed by using the tools we already have:
Diet, exercise, not smoking, limit alcohol, protect yourself from ultra violet light, regular medical exams and cancer screening.

Bat Controversy: Penalty for Altered Bat

bat and thought it had been altered.

The director was called over to make a decision on the bat. The director reported that the bat only appeared to be worn, but had not been altered to gain any advantage.

The director elected to remove the bat from play to avoid controversy, unfortunately that move actually created controversy because the opposing teams then assumed there was something wrong with the bat.

In Reno, the owner of the bat approached the director's table before play began to make sure the bat was legal before she began to play. The three directors at the table all examined the bat and came to the same conclusion as the director who originally examined the bat at the Southwest: the bat was worn but had not been altered to improve performance.

The directors called me, as tournament director, and I instructed them to make sure the bat was not removed from play because they had ruled it a legal bat.

We take altered bats very seriously. Here is the SSUSA Rule:

3.4(6) • PENALTY FOR USING AN ALTERED BAT OR SOFTBALL

SSUSA agreed to follow the 2007 Summit Altered Bat Recommendation:

A. Penalty for using an altered bat – If a bat is suspected of being altered to enhance performance, a tournament official will determine if the bat will be allowed to be used in play or will request that it be voluntarily surrendered by the owner for inspection.

If the player refuses to immediately surrender the bat to tournament officials, the player will be suspended for ten years, the manager for one year, and the team will forfeit all games played in the current tournament.

If the player voluntarily surrenders the bat and it is found to be altered to enhance performance, the player will be suspended for five years and the manager for one year.

The bat, if surrendered by the owner, will be held and forwarded for testing through the National SSUSA office at the conclusion of the tournament. A second offense may result in the lifetime ban of the player. Immediate actions for use of an altered bat will also result in the following:

- 1. Batter will be called out and ejected from the tournament.
- 2. Base runners will be instructed to return to the base(s) occupied at the time the suspected altered bat was used, providing there are fewer than three outs.
- 3. The bat (if surrendered by the owner) will be held and forwarded for testing through the National SSUSA Office at the conclusion of the tournament

Enhance Softball With a Hitting Club

By Art Eversole

On several occasions when traveling to a SSUSA tournament, some players tell me that they had not picked up a bat since the last tournament. These guys are not ready for tournament play. In many cases they don't get going until the last day of the bracket games and by then it may be too late for them to help the team.

A few years ago, I visited the Woodlawn hitting club in Florida with my hitting partner Brett "Kreugs" Kreuger. Brett and I were on our way to take part in the Jacksonville early season spring classic put on by Curt Hollis. We planned to first stop in Woodlawn to meet with the Woodlawn coordinator Dave "Pops" North and take part in the batting practice sessions for two days.

Dave and his associates had developed an early morning hitting activity that was organized and fun. Having a regularly scheduled time and place to practice your game adds to your physical skills as well as socially.

There are innumerable benefits in belonging to a hitting club and a salient one is in keeping your game tuned and ready for play. If you have a club in your local area, then try and join or start your own. You can pass the word at your leagues or use softball internet message boards to get out the word about starting or joining an existing hitting club.

In 2013 I started a hitting club at a local facility in the city of Seatac, Wash. This facility had fields that were turfed for soccer and softball but were not regulation size; so a perfect site for BP and they were available in the mornings.

We ask for a $10/month donation from players (cost is about 50 cents a session) and we have about 25 members who participate but not every day. Players show up when they want and no one is taking attendance.

It's a good idea for the hitting club coordinator to make every session, especially if bringing the equipment, or delegate to a lieutenant. We like to keep the participation age at 50+ but understand that a weekday morning hitting club is more suited for the retired senior player than for those still employed.

It's extremely important to maintain and take good care of equipment. We change out the balls three times a year to maintain good balls to hit. Try and order only 44COR/375 compression balls and not the really high performance ones so the player gets a feel for what they can do in league and tournaments.

A typical day starts with players meeting in the parking lot at 9:45a.m. every weekday morning except Wednesdays which is our league day. We unload the equipment (normally hauled around by the coordinator) on to the transport cart and head to our field. We hit in groups of three with each batter taking three rounds of 10 pitches that are put into play. Having pitchers who can throw batting practice strikes is essential to keeping things moving.

I use my bullhorn to make the announcement for the next group of three to hit. I know everyone's name and skill level as I try to match up ability; I also hit the lefties in their own group. When it's time to replenish the pitchers ball-caddies I'll sound two blasts of the air-horn and the truck cart will then be rolled to the pitchers area.

Benefits:

- Meeting and getting to know more senior players socially,
- Provides a setting for finding a team that fits your skills and time constraints,
- Prepares players for league and tournament play,
  - On-site hitting instruction,

- Swinging and testing the latest bat marketing sensations.
- Determination of bat speed and ball exit speed,
- Provides for fielding and pitching practice.

Equipment:

- 1. Pitcher protection screen (I.Screen),
- 2. Ball Collection area safety screen (7 foot wide),
- 3. Ball collection buckets.
- 4. Standup ball-caddies for pitcher's comfort,
- 5. Ball bucket flat truck cart for transporting,
- 6. Bullhorn (field communications),
- 7. Bat Compression kit (determines if bat is game ready or toast),
  - 8. First Aid kit,
- 9. Mounted radar gun on tripod,
- 10. Large wireless bat speed monitor device.

You're certainly not expected to fortify your startup hitting club with many of the extras that I've outlined above: it's a matter of how much money the club desires to invest. Just make sure you decide on the core essentials that will prepare players for league play and tournaments and for the building of social connections which are critical for enhancing the total softball experience.

Happy Hitting,

Art Eversole can be reached at Bashman01@earthlink.net.

A highlight from the 80 AAA division came from Forever Young Diamonds (UT), who turned a triple play. "The great thing about this triple play was it was done on 65 foot base paths," said manager Doyle Neuenswander. "The bases were loaded with nobody out. The ball was hit hard by one of the players from Redwood Gold Rush to the shortstop Ralph Brinton, who tagged the runner going to third, then threw to Ronnie Guest at second for two and he threw to Roy Lehrner at first base for the third out. No runs scored."

Longtime SSUSA Player/Director Dies

Richard K. Stone, who had a lifelong passion for playing baseball and softball, died on June 12.

Richard K. Stone

A Senior Softball-USA member since the late 1990s, Stone was a longtime member of Spicer Properties (60, 65 & 70). He most recently participated in the Winter National Championships in Florida this past November.

Stone, 72, of Keedysville, Md., also played with Virginia Cavaliers, High Street Bucs, Jersey Metro and Joe B's Softball among others. He was a member of the Washington County Senior Softball League and the Frederick Senior League in Maryland.

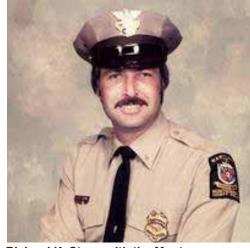

Additionally, Stone worked for SSUSA as a director, working tournaments such as the Atlantic Coast Championships and the Winter National Championships.

"Stoney played softball with a passion," said Ronnie Miller, one of Stone's teammates with Spicer Properties. "He loved the game and was an awesome manager. His smile and kindness was like an epidemic. He will be sadly missed."

"Stoney was not only a leader, but one of the most blunt, honest guys I have ever had the pleasure to know," said Jack Spicer. "He was a quiet general as a coach, never hurt a guy's feelings, never asked for respect, but he in every way received it because he was a class guy. He will be missed by not just Spicer teammates, but anyone that shared moments talking with him for a few minutes, or like myself and others that knew him, as a friend and of course playing with Stoney on our team or against him."

Stone served in the Army and was a 25-year veteran of the Montgomery County Police Department. He also served as chief of police of Brunswick, Md., and Lewes, Del. He was an executive director of the Maryland Sheriff's Youth Ranch and served as bailiff for the Washington County District Court.

Stone is survived by his wife of 50 years, Carol, son Richard K. Stone, Jr., daughter, Sandra Lynn Stone, Grandson, Jason Lee Grossnickle and great grandson Karter Mason Grossnickle.
