By Donna McGuire Softball News Report

Great weather, spirited competition, and 20 games decided by one run highlighted the 2023 SSUSA/CAN-Sirs Northern California State Championship played June 9-11 in the Sacramento area.

The tournament was named to help promote the CAN-Sirs program. Pete Davignon, of Chico, California, created CAN- Sirs in 2010. Using donations and the proceeds from tournaments he ran, Davignon built an organization of senior players who were cancer survivors. The organization was dedicated to promoting cancer awareness and prevention.

In 2016, Davignon and SSUSA teamed up to co-sponsor the annual SSUSA/CAN-Sirs Northern California State Championships. Davignon died in 2021, but his vision lives on.

Bill played baseball at Purdue University and entered the real estate brokerage industry after Of the 41 participating teams, 12 emerged with berths to the 2023 Tournament of Champions set for late January in Polk County, Florida.

Some nail-biting championship play enthralled spectators who attended games played at the Sacramento Softball Complex and the Foskett Regional Park in Lincoln.

A championship series involving a new Warriors 60+ AAA team out of Sacramento caught the eye of Tournament Director Bill Hill.

"The Warriors double dipped a very good team, It's 5 O'Clock Somewhere 65+ AAA, for their first-ever tournament win," Hill said.

One unusual situation involved two serious injuries happening almost simultaneously on different fields at Foskett Regional Park, said Nic Francois, who also served as a director.

On Field 2, an outfielder for the 50+ AAA team JMR of Oregon dislocated his left shoulder when he dived to catch a fly ball and landed hard. After being tended by a doctor and a former medic who were at the game, the player declined an ambulance and instead took a private vehicle ride to the emergency room. He later returned to watch his team finish tournament play, Francois said.

On Field 4, a pitcher for the 55+ Major team JU Entertainment of California collapsed to the ground after a sharply batted ball struck him in the groin. Fortunately, the pitcher recovered and remained in the game.
